the first two challenges are to find the right wifi password and then to authenticate to the router. once you have control over the router, you can perform just about anything you want. the cool thing is that you can actually use the router as a wireless hotspot, and turn it on and off as you like. some of these routers have the option to broadcast some of the access points to the outside world, so you can use the router to provide network access to your home. some, like the netgear n600, allow the router to serve as the dhcp server, in which case you don't have to worry about setting up a dhcp server. all of the above options are not ideal because of the amount of time required to crack a wep or wpa-psk password. but, if you really need a password cracked in a hurry, you can use the following tools. wireless password crackers are tools that the use a dictionary of known passwords to look for the corresponding password in a wireless network. they are useful tools when you've lost your wireless password and you don't have the password to access the router. the wifi cracker can be used on many different operating systems including windows, macos, and linux. this tool can be used to crack the wep, wpa, wpa2, and wpa3 security protocols. wifi cracker can crack wpa2-psk and wpa2-personal security networks, as well as all security protocols implemented by the cisco aironet family of devices. after the installation rolled back, i tried to reinstall it again and this time i received error that it couldnt stop one of the services and installation was interupted and automatic roll back was in place. after that i have noticed that previous composer is uninstalled and while im trying to install the new one and use the current database i receive error message that cannot connect to database all odbc dsn settings are correct and testing is successful, but during installation after i enter username and password keep getting this: error occurred while connecting to database.
