you can also use facebook messenger to message friends when you use your computer and tablet. once installed, go to fb.com/messenger and sign into your facebook account or create a new one. once you're logged in, messages will display on your friends list. messages can also appear in your inbox. if you'd prefer not to depend on facebook for your social connections, but still want to see who's in your friends list, google+ is an excellent alternative. the service added some features over the years, and has just about caught up with facebook. it's no different than myspace or facebook.

it's mostly about connecting with your friends and posting your own stuff. compared to the other social networks, facebook has more of a mobile focus, with google+ tending to be more focused on computers. the users just don't buy it. they see right through the illusion. sometimes you're building your own list, sometimes they're building your own list, you're building theirs. you can't just say that people are building their own lists. they are. facebook has added picture and video capabilities to the timeline and profile. you can share photos and videos right from the timeline, whether they come from facebook or third party sites. you can also find videos from friends in a similar way, so they appear just below the news section of your profile. facebook is growing and growing, and it's no wonder why. facebook has been used to promote both good and bad activities, and it's possible that someone could abuse the system. it's why you would need to make sure that you're only reading friend news from people you actually know in real life and are friends with on the social network.

the site is not for free. it's completely free to use for advertising, to interact with friends and even to receive notifications. you can also turn on notifications via the app to stay aware of what's going on in your life on the site. you can also set up reminders for yourself that will alert you when certain people or things (friends, groups of friends or brands) appear on your news feed and thus allow you to take action on items that are important to you personally. facebook began as a website that allows you to keep in touch with friends and family, but in recent years the brand has taken on a much larger meaning. facebook has partnered with governments, media outlets, and companies to promote their products. the exact data zuckerberg has on you will vary from country to country. every time you visit facebook you are also tracked by cookies. the web address of the cookie can be found in the footer of your browser. last week, zuckerberg and facebook coo sheryl sandberg and the heads of facebook's other messaging apps held a conference call with reporters, during which zuckerberg repeatedly referred to the platform's 2 billion monthly active users as the world's most valuable. and that number is not a typo. in its fourth quarter, facebook said that 2.32 billion people visited the site per month, up 13% from a year earlier. facebook messenger has 300 million monthly active users, up from 260 million in the previous quarter. instagram, meanwhile, has more than 700 million monthly active users, up from 600 million. the app draws in your interests, as well as your friends, friends of friends, and friends of those friends. once you've finished, post it to fbconnect, a feed of content from facebook. if a message comes from someone you know, you can reply or invite
