Genx Gx Pad 100 Firmware

The problem is that I don't have any i9100 downloadables for my android tablet as I haven't been able to figure out what kind of tablet I have so I would like to know if someone can help me to identify my tablet and what firmware can I use. I have my tablet and I can get into the recovery mode but I don't know what to do next. I use to have a gen 5 device with the same problem but I could download the firmware and it was working great with it. Now I tried a gen 6 device and it won't get in to the recovery mode. I can get into factory reset mode but I can't seem to get into the recovery mode. Can you please help. I really want to run it again but I don't know if I will be able to get it to work again or not. The tablet I have is a Note 3. I believe it's some one. And I don't have any of the software and firmware downloadables but they told me to ask you guys if they can recommend one of the following tablets. The only reason why I need to get it working again is because when I tried to update it, it kept rebooting. I have 2 or 3 different firmware and one which I have downloaded but it's not the right firmware for the tablet that I have. When you bought your tablet and flashed it already it has factory software customizations and that is your Android operating system and may be missing some features you want or if you have the 4.4.4 "Android OS" it may be missing one or more things, but none the less this is the Android operating system you are using at this point and its time to get the Android firmware of your tablet back to what it was. Also the Android ROM you have flashed and or installed is probably what the tablet was originally sold with.
