Submit Link | MoreA Los Angeles judge on Thursday ordered an eight-year-old girl cut off from her father because the girl wouldn't put on a school uniform without him. Family law expert Kelly McKeever said parents have been ordering their children to wear uniforms for years. "This is really saying you can't go to school without your parents," said McKeever, a professor at Loyola Law School. "I've never heard of a father trying to force a young child to go to school in the absence of a parent." The girl's attorney argued in court that the father, a hairdresser, is an unfit parent because he has been distracted and has been reported for having images of child pornography on his phone.
