The style's origins were in the Congolese beat of the 1960s and Afro-Belgian rumba, but it took the full impact of the R&B of the 1970s to make it popular on a global scale. The Suruku is a dance with nearly circular movements and a vague similarity to spider-man's web-spinning technique. It can be acrobatic and playful at the same time. Its technique is also similar to the Afro-Brazilian samba and the West African maraca. Afro: Obaqueas - Umbutshisho Afro Circuses were and still are very popular in sub-Saharan Africa, especially among the Bantu groups, such as the Congolese, South African, Swazi, Mozambican, Ghanaian, Togolese and Yoruba. They are also popular among the Ibo, Igbo, Yoruba, Kanuri, Hausa and some Caribbean peoples, such as the Maroons, and the Taino of the Lesser Antilles. Some people consider them the perfect soundtrack for clubbing in the summer. Afro Circus Deep Dark Rumba: There is much difference in the rhythms of a Sankuru and an Afro-Belgian rumba.
