In such a device, a power source voltage is supplied to a voltage supply circuit that generates a reference voltage, and a drive voltage is generated by multiplying the reference voltage and a drive voltage by a predetermined voltage conversion ratio. Furthermore, in such a device, a gate voltage is generated by dividing the drive voltage by a predetermined voltage division ratio. Furthermore, in such a device, in order to supply an appropriate drive voltage, the reference voltage and the drive voltage are switched by switching means to be provided. Furthermore, in such a device, in order to generate a drive voltage based on a reference voltage, in a voltage generation circuit that generates a drive voltage based on a reference voltage, a drive signal and a drive signal based on the reference voltage are transmitted to a switching circuit, and the drive signal based on the reference voltage is transmitted to the voltage generation circuit by switching means.
