Maidens are depicted as usually very fragile beings that should not be made fun of because they will be feeling insulted by it. Tigers are a type of animal which is known for their strength, but not necessarily their brains. Mycelium is the root system of mushrooms, and also the word for the network of filaments that makes up the fungus. (I) Face/voice over by a UK representative of the artist. The account of how a piece was selected was made by the artist himself, as it would not be proper to do that. An easy-to-use screen saver that shows the faces and voices of children that have been included in the album.The faces include those from Japanese, American,Canadian,and European children.The voices include children from each of these countries, and there is also an example of a voice from a Chinese person. Description: A tree is considered a living creature in Japanese culture, and therefore is given the name of a 'tree person'.It is an immortal creature which can live forever.And just like trees,they live in a state of independence and self-sufficiency. The story of what the tree person is,however,has become somewhat unclear in recent years.There have been different interpretations of the meaning of the name.This screen saver is made in order to resolve this issue. Description: A dragon is a mythical creature in Japanese culture.The word for the dragon in Japanese is a combination of the words 'kuro'(black) and 'kurai'(dragon).Dragon's body has four legs,three wings,and is usually long and narrow.Its face is characterised by an enormous forehead,long whiskers,and a mouth that can open wide. In Japanese culture, dragons are usually quite evil,but here they are portrayed as quite peaceful creatures. The story of how the creation of the dragon was imagined is uncertain,but the account of the creation in the Japanese history book is almost as vivid and realistic as a real-life picture of a dragon.It is also the oldest account of the story. Description: An illusion is a thing that is perceived by people to be real when it is not. It is the illusion that makes us think

The painting was made in 1874 and it was originally painted on a canvas measuring 16.5" x 16.5". The work "Nymphs" is a creation of the French naturalist and impressionist school. Renoir's attention is concentrated on the depiction of the beautiful women. In the modern painting, we can notice the roundness of the breasts and the lower body, which is combined with swirling locks of hair. The artist also studied the character of the face: there is a tenderness and sensuality that complements the sensuousness of the naked bodies. The major part of the canvas is occupied by the nymphs: there are 9 of them, all of them nude and in a row on the shore of a lake. The colours of the nymphs are soft and natural, while the background of the lake is painted in darker shades. Karol Szymanowski (1882-1937) Karol Szymanowski was a Polish composer and musicologist. He is known for his masterpieces: "Notturmo", "Concertant" and "The Sensitive Plant" (also known as the "Jerusalem Symphony"). He was born in Tykocin, but he spent most of his life in Paris. Karol Szymanowski died in Paris in 1937. Karol Szymanowski wrote a lot of music. The composition "Concertant" from 1904-1906 was performed by more than 100 orchestras. The most popular Polish composer in the 20th century was his student, Krzysztof Penderecki. Music Background The music from "Concertant" was composed by Karol Szymanowski and it was performed by the Wroclaw Philharmonic Orchestra in 1904. The piece "Notturmo" from 1915 was composed by Karol Szymanowski and it was performed
