"This is part of our efforts to continue to establish Alibaba as a global company." For Alibaba's domestic business, which is thought to account for about 70 per cent of sales, the currency plunge means that some of the cost savings and efficiencies that the company has achieved in part thanks to US tariffs are no longer available. International headquarters Alibaba now has two offices in China, in Shanghai and Hangzhou. The group is looking to establish a third office in Hangzhou. The group has 10 regional offices in Canada, Germany, the UK, France, Italy, Japan, Mexico, the US and Australia, and 16 international offices in the Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, Denmark, Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaysia, Australia, India, Japan, Philippines, Canada and the US. Expansion in the US is crucial to Alibaba's growth; the company will need to open approximately 300 more offices in the world's largest economy to reach its target of reaching 400 million active users in China. Alibaba also has a growing presence in the UK. In September 2018, the group invested in a 10 per cent stake in Carousell, a Chinese car sales company. In September 2019, the group secured its first investment in the UK, through a £150 million buyout of the payments company SumUp. In January 2020, Alibaba announced plans to invest in a blockchain-based payments service. Its decision to open an international headquarters in Singapore in 2012 has paid off.
