The makers of Tanu Weds Manu have tried to make it as a romantic comedy and have not made it as such. Though the plot is interesting, the technical part does not justify it. The direction, music and dialogues are not that great. The biggest setback in Tanu Weds Manu 3 is its treatment towards the female lead. She is your usual girl next door type and the makers have made her similar to the previous females. What makes the film even more disappointing is the way they handled the characters of the other lead characters. The plot of the film is based on the real life incidents of comedian Manu Sharma’s fiancée Bindiya. They had been having an affair with one another and she had even filed a false complaint against Manu. This is the reason why Manu’s family and his close friends thought that Bindiya has dumped him. In the film, Manu Sharma and his friend Samrat play the role of a married couple. In the film, the lead actors try to get closer to each other with the help of a court case. After they pass the trial, they plan to elope. However, they find that the said case has been filed against them and the police will not allow them to run away. Manu and Samrat have to spend the entire night in jail. In order to get bail, they get one by lying to the judge that they have been made the accused of the rape and not the love affair. Mumbai: Wife-to-be, Bindiya Pradhan (Shriya Saran) whose husband, Manu Sharma (Karan Singh Grover), is a stand-up comedian who works in a children's show, is involved in an extramarital affair with music producer Anand (Raza Murad). Things get a little sticky when Manu's parents, Mamta (Sharad Kelkar) and Ashok Sharma (Ashok Selwal), suspect that Bindiya had used Manu to chase the producer away. Bindiya reveals that Manu is the only man with whom she was ever sexually attracted. She further reveals that she had decided to drop the case against Manu for the sole purpose of getting engaged to him. The film opens with Bindiya being called to the police station to file a false complaint against Manu. It then cuts to Manu, Samrat (Rakul Preet Singh), Bindiya, Mamta and Ashok arriving at the police station. Bindiya is surrounded by a rowdy group of goons and when they arrive at the police station, the police officer refuses to allow Manu to bail her. The goons then get aggressive and this results in Manu, Samrat and Bindiya being f988f36e3a
