PARP is activated by a variety of DNA damages such as those induced by oxidative stress generated by ischemia/reperfusion. The objective of the proposal is to elucidate the role of the PARP enzyme in ischemia/reperfusion injury and to establish the usefulness of this model to determine potential therapeutic interventions. The specific aims are to assess the role of PARP in ischemia/reperfusion injury in the heart by: 1) Mapping the time course of PARP activation in response to ischemic/reperfusion events in the intact heart. 2) Determining the effect of inhibition of PARP on infarct size in the heart. 3) Determining the effect of PARP inhibition on markers of apoptosis and necrosis in the heart. 4) Studying the
