How are you doing, friends? I've really been enjoying both my illustration work and my music. (That smallish piece of art at the top of the page is for a new song I've been working on in the last month. You'll hear it in about a week, when I finish with the mastering.) The tricky thing with being an illustrator is that it's so much work for so little reward, so often! But I try to do something in every month that I just don't have time for in the rest of the year, to keep me striving to produce more. For instance, I was going to actually shoot a video and post that, but I'm at a busy time in my life right now, and got busy working on other jobs and being with my family. I'm actually still planning on posting this over the summer, and I will, at some point, make the video, but for now, here's one of the projects from just this year that I finished up, which I'm very pleased with: I am also pleased with the work I've done in illustrating some posters for our local theater, which is putting up a list of shows they have done this season. That was something I had a lot of fun doing, f988f36e3a
