Now the company is also offering a cheaper version of the $35 Google Chromecast, but with a few important differences. Amazon has created a new $15 version of the Chromecast designed for people on a tight budget. Just like Google's original Chromecast, the device plugs into a TV's HDMI port and can run a few apps and play videos on local streaming services. These cheaper Chromecasts come in two versions: one without a headphone jack, for $15 and one with the 3.5mm jack for $20. They are not officially sold by Amazon, but you can buy them on the company's website. You can also find them at Best Buy stores. The device is not sold by Amazon, but it can be purchased at Best Buy A Google representative told BuzzFeed News the company does not have any comment about the Amazon Chromecast. Amazon's Chromecasts are fairly different from the original Google device, including a different layout of buttons on the front. The buttons aren't all exactly in the same place and the Amazon device also comes in two different colors. These cheaper Chromecasts are designed for people who don't have the money to spend on a smartphone or smart TV, but also don't have a high-end TV with a USB-C port. If you still want to use your existing Android smartphone, that won't work, since the Amazon Chromecast only has one USB-C port. If you don't have a Chromecast, but still want to play video on your TV, Amazon has you covered there, too. The company is also selling an $8 Fire
