Since this spring, the Central Coast farm community has hosted a series of town hall meetings where the Central Valley farmers union is trying to educate people about immigration, new federal labor rules that would make it harder for farmworkers to get jobs, and other issues that are playing out nationally and internationally in the face of the president's hardline immigration policies. As the county's agricultural workers advocate, Clare Oaks tells CBS News the Trump administration's "zero tolerance" immigration policies "are really aimed at turning California into a mecca for deportation." "But, if you think about it, the rest of the nation is suffering from the same problem that California is," said Oaks, who estimates that about half of the roughly 50 people
