Monday, September 16, 2015 This video gives you a brief overview of the kinds of things you'll need to think about when creating a 3D movie. There are so many 3D movies out there that it can be hard to know where to start. If you're going to shoot a 3D movie it's important to think about the budget, the technical needs of the movie, and the special needs of the story. If you have more questions or need help in any of these areas, contact us at info@turningkeyworks.com Sunday, September 15, 2015 Creating digital stills to add to your animated film requires some technical knowledge of the camera and the kind of photo you want. This course covers the basics of capturing digital stills for your animated film. Whether you want to add a still of your animated character to your next film, to provide additional help in the story-telling process or simply to fill in the pictures that were left out, digital stills can make the film come to life. Watch this short video to learn more: Saturday, September 14, 2015 The first thing you will need is a good tripod. I use the popular Manfrotto 055XPROB 4 PRO tripod with a Manfrotto 055XPROB 4 PRO 3-Axis Ball Head, along with Manfrotto 055XPROB 4 PRO 2-Way Ball Head. Then, you need a camera (preferably with a built-in microphone) and a microphone to record your sound. Next, you will need some type of recording software. In this case, I use Ableton Live,
