A free piece of software which can intercept any kind of network traffic which can be used to block a computer from any unauthorized Internet activity or to steal sensitive information.The First Day Back to Work On Friday, we worked like crazy people, eager to get back to work. It was the first day back to work for me in a while. It's one thing to work from home, and quite another to come to work while everyone else is still in the office. For me, I found out how they've already been using my productivity, and it's been great. The first day back to work was busy enough, but what's even more exciting is that we haven't lost much productivity because we've been able to maintain this same routine. There was a little flurry of activity the first hour but by the second hour we were back to our normal routine. That's what I like most about this no-limits experiment. The one downside was that it was hard for me to concentrate. It was hard to find someone to go to because half
