----- SpamBox is an anti-spam application for Microsoft Outlook. It is a fully featured anti-spam product. It scans your inbox and learns what spams what. It uses machine learning to learn what makes a good email and what makes a spam email. It learns over time and you can configure it to always be on top of new spammer tricks and bad practices. It works in your browser and is completely invisible. It does not mess with your email in any way, and no settings need to be changed. It just filters spam out of your email. You can have multiple filters and they can be configured to work together for maximum effectiveness. Built for Outlook ----- - Built for Outlook 2007, 2010 and 2013 - Can be used on the desktop or on a mobile device - Uses the "contact list" for spam filtering - Works with POP3 and IMAP4 - Support for multiple filters SpamBox for Outlook 2007/2010/2013 is a completely new application, but it does not mess with your email in any way and does not change your settings. It is designed for Outlook 2007/2010/2013 users. It is completely invisible and does not require any configuration. You can have as many different spam filters as you want. The filters are configured to work together. For example, the spam filter can know that it should ignore spam that contains specific words in a specific order, and it can ignore all emails with a specific sender name. An email can be filtered multiple times, and the first filter that takes action on a message is what is considered the main filter. For example, if you have a filter that checks for a specific sender and rejects all messages from that sender, and another filter that checks for a specific subject and rejects all messages from that sender, the first filter to process a message is the main filter. If you want to reject emails from one sender with the first filter, and then the same email with the second filter, you will have to configure SpamBox to pass both messages through the second filter. However, if you want to filter out both messages in the first filter, you do not need to pass them through the second filter. SpamBox does not mess with your settings and it is completely invisible. You can have as many filters as you want, and you can configure them to work together. For example, the spam filter can be configured to ignore spam from specific IP addresses, and the antivirus filter can be configured
