The Ottawa Senators have reached the third round of the NHL playoffs for the first time since 2011 after a 2-0 win over the New York Islanders in Game 6 of the Eastern Conference Final on Friday night at Canadian Tire Centre. Senators coach Paul MacLean made it very clear beforehand that he believed his team's success in the third round of the playoffs would be entirely dependent on how it fared in game six. "It's the only way that we can get to the Stanley Cup," he said. "And if you look at the game six after a one-goal win or a one-goal loss, which is what happened, it's going to be based on a game three. And it's really going to be based on how we played in that game six. If we want to win the Stanley Cup, the way we're going to win the Stanley Cup, we have to win game three." After a particularly dominant first period, the Senators went into the second period down by one goal on an islander late in the frame. In typical fashion, the Islanders came out and dominated in the second period, taking a 3-1 lead into the second intermission. Just past the midway mark of the second period, the Senators went into the Ottawa net, defusing the puck on Michael Hutchinson's stick with a powerful deke on Parise, thus denying the New York Islanders a power play. As the Senators scrambled to get the puck, Chris Neil, on Parise's line, was able to get the rebound and add a goal to take the lead back for the Senators, 2-1. The Senators didn't let f988f36e3a
