I have created a custom property type in Delphi that can hold string type values. I have a large program that is using this property and requires an enumerator function for the custom type. I am new to Delphi and have not found any examples of how to do this. I know I need to start in the declaration section, but after that how do I enumerate through the strings? I'm using Delphi XE. A: The simplest way to write enumerator is: function GetStringPropertyName(SomeObject: TObject; AProperty: string): string; begin Result := AProperty; end; function MyObject.PropertyIsFixed: boolean; begin Result := False; end; I can't provide specific details for enum in Delphi XE, but I can give you some hints from my Delphi XE experience. First, you need an interface for your custom class: TMyCustomClass = Class(TComponent) private FMyProperty: string; end; implementation ...but you have to ensure that you've overridden the ToString function for that class. Also, your custom property has to be of type TMyCustomProperty. After you've created the class and set the property's type to TMyCustomProperty, you're ready to start defining the enumerator: function GetValue(const Value: TMyCustomProperty; const Obj: TObject): string; begin Result := Value.FMyProperty; end; Now, when you need to implement ToString, use the code I've given you: function TMyCustomClass.ToString: string; begin Result := FMyProperty; end; And if your property must be enumerable (i.e. if PropertyIsFixed cannot be overridden), call the static function EnumPropertyValues and pass in the object to be enumerated, the property's type and the value of the property: procedure EnumerateMyCustomProperty(const Obj: TObject; const Prop
