Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a novel thermoplastic resin and more particularly to a polyamide resin which can form a high-strength film having excellent notch sensitivity when used for parts of a glass run channel and can be used as a material for making a seal, a gasket, a process carrier plate or the like. 2. Description of the Prior Art Polyamide resins such as nylon 11 and nylon 12 are excellent in mechanical properties such as mechanical strength and have been widely used as a conventional material for parts of a glass run channel of automobiles. Recently, a method of producing automobile parts which is different from the conventional two step molding process, i.e. a method of producing parts as a single piece, has come into use. For example, instead of a two step molding process in which a molded article is produced by first producing a sheet and then molding the sheet, one-step molding in which a sheet is produced directly
